Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 26 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Fine today in the south, elsewhere turning more unsettled.

Today:
Rain will move southeastwards across Scotland, heavy in places, before reaching Northern Ireland and the far north of England later. Elsewhere, early cloud will clear to leave another fine day with plenty of sunshine.

Tonight:
Further rain affecting northern and eastern Scotland, persistent on hills, with some patchy light rain across northern England and north Wales. Clear skies in the south, turning frosty.

Tuesday:
Cool and cloudy with further rain for northern and eastern Scotland. Showers elsewhere, some of them heavy, though some places missing them. Sunniest in the far southeast.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Rain in the south for a time Wednesday, otherwise a mixture of clear or sunny spells and scattered showers, locally heavy. Cold throughout with overnight rural frosts becoming more widespread.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.